Couple other interesting tools that might be helpful. Three flow diagrams, one each for stormwater/dewatering, City Landuse (although we may not need this anymore), and the PCP (Project Construction Permit) process which is a name we have used in the past for the integrated street use permit.

Also we should find some time to have me walk you through the two databases that we have;

- The Project Permit Tracking Database, which tracks the status of each permit and provides info on each application we have submitted and permit received. and
- The Permit Application Questions and Responses Database, which we don't actually seem to use much but you might find interesting. It was the final product of an effort I think you and Chad helped with when you were originally on the project of trying to compile all the different questions the different application forms asked.
