That is correct. The $50 million is for the public utility relocations at the north and south portal for the bored tunnel only. The $50 does not include any of the markups, risk, contingency, or inflation. When those are added the $50M becomes $168M. In addition, Scenario O contained an additional $30M (raw) in public utility relocations which becomes $100M fully loaded.

In the tunnel estimate, there is $50 million for utilities. I assume these are Seattle Public utilities.
